Wedding Coordination

Why a Wedding Coordinator?

Many brides and grooms today are busy with careers. They find they don't have time to plan a wedding - and after reviewing the myriad details involved in planning a wedding, you may decide you could use some help. We are here to provide the wedding you dream of; we handle the details, leaving you the time to enjoy your engagement, your family and each other.

At every major event in life professionals are present! Because a professional wedding coordinator brings repeat business to a facility, (s)he often has negotiating power not available to any individual scheduling a one time event. We work with only the best wedding professionals to ensure a perfect day.

We have five packages to choose from to meet all budget levels. The packages can also be customized to meet your individual needs, or billed at an hourly rate, especially if only limited services are required. All packages include 30 minutes free consultation to discuss your individual needs. Is your wedding any less important?!

Highlights of Services:

- Wedding Planning
- Wedding Day Management
- Help select ceremony & reception sites.
- Etiquette Guidelines
- Budget Planning
- Vendor referrals
- Specialty rentals
- Themes
- RSVP Service

Fitting Your Gown To You

Your wedding day. Some brides start to plan when they are five, some five weeks in advance. In either case, other than the days your children are born, all agree your wedding is the most important day of your life. Have you ever cared more about how you will look? Don't worry. Every bride is beautiful. Truly. To enhance that beauty, just remember to hide your flaws and accentuate your assets.

Each bride is exquisite. In today's world, there is no reason not to be. Even if a bride has a flaw or two, we know every trick in the book.

Like your entire wedding, your gown makes a statement, reflecting your personality, your personal expression. Are you chic? Sophisticated? Classic? Sexy? Traditional? Avant garde? If you have never fallen in love with a dress before, now is the time to start.

The first dictum is ask for help. True, it is your day and your dress. However, the professionals at Maplewood Bridal can lead you to the right gown, eliminating hassles, headaches, and hours, helping you achieve the ideal result. Our Image Consultants are trained to find what works. If ever there was a day to rely on an expert, this is it. As professionals, we have seen it all. You benefit from that experience. Let us try to make your dreams come true.

Speaking of dreams, it is wonderful when you walk into our bridal gallery with ideas, as well as pictures you've gathered from magazines and the Internet. Photos you like give us a feel for your taste, in addition to a level of dressiness. A morning wedding in the country may call for a different dress than a black tie dinner-dance in a hotel ballroom.

It starts with proportion. The dress may be gorgeous, but you will never look right, if the lines are wrong. Think of your silhouette. Begin with your best features, then ease into the ones that are less than perfect. Do you have a tiny waist? Great cleavage? Wonderful shoulders? A lovely swan neck? Show them off!

First comes the neckline to frame your face. Do you prefer a high neck or strapless? Sweetheart necks are still very popular, and honestly flatter everyone. Do you want to wear a special necklace? Certain earrings? Think about the neckline of a dress you feel great in. Keep all of that in mind.

A good rule of thumb is try on no less than three gowns. You may be surprised. A dress may look like nothing on a hanger, transform your figure when it's on. Again, the professional Wedding and Image Consultants at Maplewood Bridal can look at you, and lead you to the right style, the right designer. Certain manufacturers cut larger or smaller, some work better for petites, some for fuller figures. Don't ask for disaster. ask for help.

There is no petite bridal line. Designers just reduce proportions. Something with a natural waist will give you a longer line.

If you have large hips, we recommend two solutions. An A-line gown gives height, reduces width. Another option calls for a hollow waist, beginning an inch and a half below your natural waist, camouflaging your heaviest part. Thick waist? A princess waist works best. If done properly, the skirt can be full--just make sure the fullness starts below your thick part. Box pleats, beginning below the hip, offer another stunning option.

Heavy thighs are easily hidden beneath a full skirt. Just stay away from anything too straight or narrow. Same rule if you have a full derriere. Remember: Draw attention away from your flaws. Concentrate on a beautiful neckline instead.

A big bust need not be a problem if the bride chooses the correct designer. Many will customize a cup size. Many girls have a Dolly Parton figure. They do not need a size 14, they need a size 8 with a 38D cup. A muslin guarantees if your shape is less than perfect, at least your dress will be.

Color plays a part. Many manufacturers now offer champagne, ivory, and blush, in addition to traditional white. Often more flattering, you may like these softer hues. The rule is there are no rules. It's your day and you should love how you look.

Lastly, never forget no one is a perfect size 6. Not even models and movie stars. An excellent seamstress makes it look that way. Maplewood Bridal's expert designers and seamstresses can custom design your gown. Creating your own special occasion dress will guarantee you the look and style you want. Our Image Consultant is available to assist with style and fit for every body type and size! Listen to her advice . . . And your gown will be perfect for your perfect day.

Getting dressed is often an illusion. How do I want to look on my wedding day? Feminine. Chic. Sensuous. Sophisticated. Timeless. Always beautiful. Memories last forever. Photographs do too. Look in the mirror. Once our Image professional has determined your body type, finding the dress of your dreams becomes a snap. Invest time with the wonderful professionals at Maplewood Bridal, and it's easier still.

"Your gown is like a kiss. You must feel it, touch it. Its memory should linger. You should smile every time you think of it." . . . Nancy Aucone. If you don't, it's not the right dress. If you do, the thrill enchants and enhances--you, your beloved, and every guest at your wedding. We at Maplewood Bridal cannot imagine a better gift.
